Dealing with Difficult People 3

Objectives

Participants will have the opportunity to:

- Reflect on your personal case studies and consider how you respond to difficult behaviours and conflict situations at work.
- Learn and practice a skill for responding to difficult behaviours

Dealing with Difficult People 4

Guidelines

Safe Place = Respect + Confidentiality

- Risk sharing your stories and trying new things
- Leave enriched by the learning and with the confidence that you are the only one leaving the room with your stories

Dealing with Difficult People 5

Case Study

Identify a recent difficult interaction / conversation with someone you have an ongoing relationship with; a work colleague, supervisor, direct report / staff, resident's family member.

Dealing with Difficult People 6

Case Study Reflection #1 (pairs)

Share a 'snap shot' of the context, surrounding your difficult conversation.

- What did the other person do that you experienced as difficult? Be specific; e.g. raised voice, rolled eyes, they said...

You will be given 2 - 3 minutes each

What impact did the conversation have on you at the moment, that night, during the week....?

Case Study Reflection #2

Imagine that the other person is sitting in your place. How would they answer the following question?

- What did you do during the conversation that they experienced as difficult or not helpful?

Take 1 ½ minutes each

- Who started this situation?
- Who has more organizational power?
- For those of you with less organizational power, does power affect the impact of what happened?

Definitions of Conflict

Conflict is difference & tension (→ the rub)

A conflict represents, first and foremost, a crisis in human interaction.

The problem isn't the problem; the problem is that we've become unable to talk about the problem...

Conflict has common and predictable patterns.

The Conflict Cycle

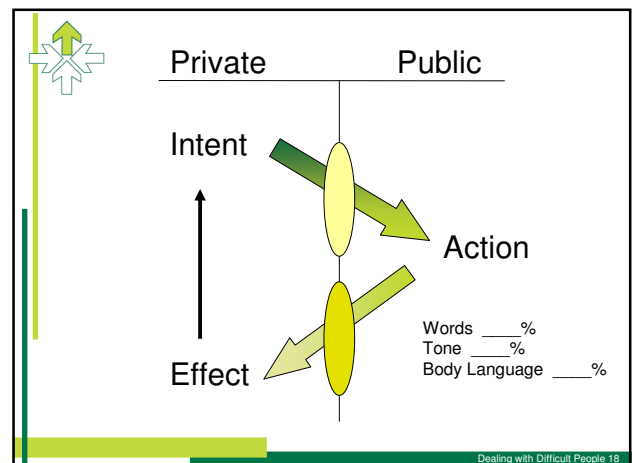

- ## Healthy Beliefs
- I have part of the story.
 - We all make contributions.
 - I have choices in how I respond.

- ## For Later Consideration
- What is your typical response to difficult behavior? Is there a pattern?
 - What consequences does that produce?
 - Can you generate other options for responding?

“Real freedom is the ability to pause between a stimulus and a response – and in that pause choose.”

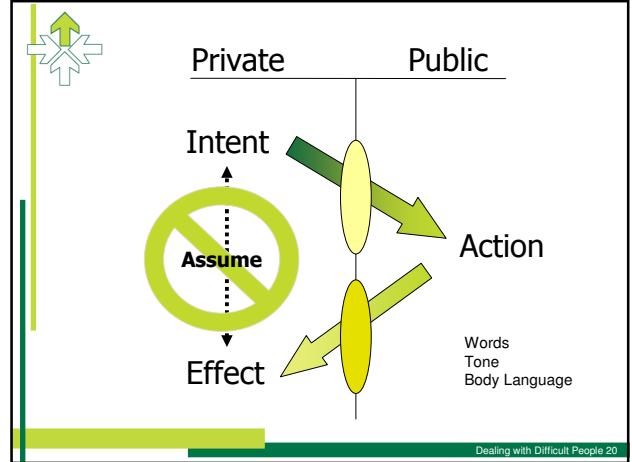

- Rollo Mae

Dealing with Difficult People 19

We judge ourselves by our intentions.

Others judge us by our impact/effect.

Basic or Fundamental Human Needs

There are varying theories and words to describe and categorize human needs (most simplify to 4 or 5)

- Freedom or autonomy
- Security or safety
- Belonging and acceptance
- Fun, self expression and discovery

Dealing with Difficult People 28

Responding to Accusation

Their Blame

Listen, acknowledge effect and seek to understand their concern

Dealing with Difficult People 30

Responding to Accusation

Identify there is a problem or an issue
Paraphrase to defuse,
validate and clarify

Common Triggers

What common complaints do you hear frequently at work that you would consider, for you, are TRIGGERS?

Paraphrasing:

- is a minimal encourager
- only 3 to 9 words

Feelings
First,
Facts
Follow

Paraphrasing

- Is easier to do when we are dealing with someone who is upset at someone else other than us.
- Is most difficult to do and can feel counter-intuitive (until the habit or pattern is set) when the person with the difficult behaviour is upset with is YOU!
- We have to resist the animal self-protection instinct to "fight or flight" and engage more deeply.

Always remember...

UNDERSTANDING \neq AGREEMENT!

That's good news because:

- Understanding is required.
- Agreement is optional.

- Paraphrasing is what you do when you don't know what to do.

- A little Empathy doesn't cost much, but goes a long way to getting an angry venter ready to hear your perspective as well...

Empathy is KEY!

- The ability to share in another emotions, thoughts and feelings.
- How hard is it to have empathy with someone when they are upset with us or making things difficult for us?
